

The Arrival

As sunset began to appear, the women's husband heard noises, he knew that giants were invading them. They both knew that they had to escape, but his wife didn't want to leave all their belongings." There is no time," explained her husband, while trying to convince his wife; finally, his wife decided to leave them. While running in terror, her husband one last time, saw their once beautiful city, but now broken. They were both running for their life's; they were both worried and intimidated because they had no food and a place to live. As they were running, the vile, viscous giants were suffocating the people with their vacuum, which has a form as a trumpet. All of a sudden, one of the giants spotted the couple." Hurry up, they're going to catch us!" demanded her husband, while hearing the devastating noises of crying, innocent people.

After being chased for ages, the scared couple, who were shaking, found a rusted, moss covered manhole. They slowly walked down the dark, gloomy alley way, until they found a ladder leading into the manhole covers depths, the dark, stinky sewers. They quietly closed the heavy, old manhole lid, thinking they were safe. But they weren't ... Suddenly, they heard footsteps of thunder. They both knew that it was the giant that was chasing them and they were frightened. Their panting hands were tightly interlocked until the giant was gone. Holding on tightly, the couple walked ahead. Screams were heard in the distance." Did you hear that?" questioned his wife, fear clearly across her face, as she questioned him. As the couple climbed out, his wife questioned again," Where are we," after what-seemed like an eternity. "I don't know?" replied her husband.

Looming over them were foggy, towering stones, that felt like they were going to collapse on them. Everywhere was deadly silent. The couple was losing hope. Traumatized and confused, they both looked around the mysterious valleys for a way out. Suddenly, her husband said "Wait, look at that, its light from outside," Finally" the woman sighed relief flooding her brain.

While shadows stalking them, her husband exclaimed" Come on, were all most there ". As they turned another corner, her husband gently helped his wife to climb up the skyscrapers. While hiding in the dark, shadowy corners, his wife suddenly saw huge, black boots, "Wait, look at those giant boots?" questioned her husband.

As they walked ahead, they found a hooded figure, which had a gleaming torch in his hand. The couple came closer to ask the man if he could help them. The man had a cheeky face and said "Hello there" stated the man." would you like my help?" questioned the man. "yes, please" replied the couple. "What do you have to offer me?" exclaimed the man." we don't have anything "explained her husband " But we do ... My necklace" replied his wife. So, the man helped them.