

The Arrival

One late evening, the streets were full of smoke and people screaming. A man rushed to wake his wife up from her deep night sleep "it's not safe we have to leave all our belongs and run," shouted the man putting his coat on. Full of fear, they rushed out of their nice and warm house into the cold, dark streets where people were running for their dear lives. Once beautiful but now an old, endangered town, as panic flooded the streets, they held their hands tightly running through alleyways and different roads hoping this will end soon. Huge giants, loomed over the unsafe town sucking innocent citizens up with huge, loud vacuums! "Run for your life's screamed a citizen, as he was begin sucked up!

All around them, all they could see were vile, vicious giants, their footsteps sounded like thunder. After what seemed like eternity, they discovered an old, rusty man hole cover, that was slightly opened. "Oh, look that man hole cover is opened should we try to climb in it? Asked the wife pointing to the left. Once they opened it, her husband helped her to climb into the, rusty man hole cover.

They appeared in a dark place, all around them, were tall, pointy crystal-like shapes. "Where are we, what is this place at least we are in a safe place for now," stated the wife, looking around. "I don't know; I think we should just sit down and take a rest because that running has made me really tiered." Said the man touching the towering shapes. Everywhere was deadly silent, it was starting to get really cold, so they started to explore the unnamed place and see if there is another way out of here. They were starting to give up until his wife stumbled across large, brown boots she ran to her husband. "there are large boots around the corner," she pointed as her heart dropped a beat.

Walking back panicking, her husband spotted a little, bright light shining in the corner. "should we risk it and go we don't have other choice," questioned the husband. They slowly approached the light they saw a ladder without hesitation they climbed the ladder. Once they climbed the ladder they saw a greedy but nice man. "Are you lost?" asked the greedy man looking at the wife's neckless. "Yes, we are we escaped something what looked and seemed like war!" "Well I can help you to get out of here but I will have to take that neckless you got their madam," "Should I give him the neckless" asked the wife. "I think so because we have no other option." They gave the greedy man the neckless and the man told them to follow him. After walking for about twenty minutes they finally came out of the unnamed place the man directed them what boat to go one and they sailed away.

By
Gloria Zabelskiate